

NEIGHBORHOOD DEVELOPMENT DIGITAL CONTENT PRODUCER

The Buffalo News is hiring a part-time reporter to uncover the latest neighborhood development projects coming to towns, villages and cities in Buffalo Niagara for BuffaloNews.com and other digital products.

Whether it's a new coffee shop, an up-and-coming store or a renovated apartment complex, these are the types of neighborhood projects that tell readers what's coming to their communities. This job will be focused on breaking news of construction projects – large and small – in communities throughout Western New York.

This is a fast-paced job mining Planning Board agendas, public records and other sources for bits of news. Candidates should have a drive for being first and accurate. This position will work closely with reporters who cover development in the city and suburbs, and will be involved in brainstorming new ways to present information online.

Reporting experience can include student journalism and internships. Hours are flexible. Send a resume, cover letter and clips to recruiter@buffnews.com.
